

TONY CASEY

Tony was a program director and administrator in the health field at the local, provincial and national levels for several decades. He had leadership responsibilities in health promotion and fitness, injury prevention, emergency preparedness, heart health, organizational development, and perhaps a few other things he's forgotten.

Tony was a decidedly unremarkable player but a better coach, coordinator, and board member ... in hockey, soccer and baseball.

In his volunteer work in sport and other areas, he has been a planner, organizer and program designer, project manager, and strategist. He was a program coordinator for the 2016 Americas Masters Games.

In a previous life, Tony enjoyed badminton, racquetball, tennis and squash. Occasionally, he still rides a unicycle.

Tony and his wife Judy started to engage in the great sport of pickleball in the fall of 2016. Both are working hard on injury prevention. They live in Vancouver, with rainbird time each year in Phoenix AZ.
